LOOKS FOR A FINE SEASON

Nationals' Heavy-hitting Outfielder Managing Bowling Alley in Chicago and Anxious for Season to Start-Thinks He Will Bat Better This Year Than Last.

By WILLIAM PEET.

Jack Lelivelt, the Nationals' hard-hitting outfielder, who joined the team in August and made such a fine record with cago that he is running a bowling alley this winter, and anxiously waiting for the bell to ring for early season practice

Lelivelt should do a whole lot better this coming season, with the experience he has gained bringing with it more confidence. He is practically certain to hold down left or center field. If he hits Keen Competition Promised for the way he did last summer nobody can possibly crowd him out of a regular job. It will be remembered that Lelivelt went to Cuba last fall with the All-Stars, including "Germany" Schaefer and other members of the Washington club. Lelivelt says that the trip did him a whole lot of good, and while complimentcame time for the boat to sail. Lelivelt's letter is short, but interesting. Here is what he says:

Dear Friend-I remember that several days before the club broke up last fall I premised to drop you a few lines during the winter. So here goes.

I am managing a bowling alley in Ohicago, and business is pretty good. I shall be glad when the time comes to report for early practice, and believe that I will get going good at the start. I usually hit well early in the season, and after a slump during midsummer, pick up again before the final games are played.

We had a great trip, and I suppose you doubtless saw by the scores but that was because we were not in the best of condition. At that, you've got to hand it to the Cubaus. Those teams we played put up mighty fine ball. I think we could get away with the majority of the games if they were played here. You should have seen the boys from Washing. You should have seen the boys from Washing ton hit, sepscially our old friend Schaefer. All the pitchers looked alike to him, and he didn't do a thing but clean up with an average of about 300, lastic events. Business, in the last year leading team. I was next and the rest of the bout started for home.
